Cookies

Cookies are small files, typically consisting of letters and numbers, downloaded onto a device when a user accesses certain websites. Cookies allow a website to recognise a user's device.

Cookies can serve a number of functions. For example, they can allow websites to remember your username, to analyse how websites are performing or to allow website operators to recommend content that they believe will be most relevant to you. Most cookies won't collect information that identifies you, and will instead collect more general information such as how users arrive at and use our websites.

There are two types of cookies: 'session cookies' and 'persistent cookies'. Session cookies are deleted from your computer when you close your browser session. Persistent cookies stay on your computer until deleted or if they reach their expiry date.
